BHNA President's Message

By Tom Schulte

As I take over as president of BHNA, I reflect on the past year and our many neighbors who contributed to the success we enjoyed in 2009. Andy Fink did a great job as our president and the neighborhood was well represented by him. Carolyn Smith, Lecky Spector, and too many others to name ("Save the Roses" Committee) spearheaded the effort to save the Bellamy Rose Garden. Thanks to generous contributions and help from the City of Tallahassee, they were able to raise over $11,000, in a tough economy, to insure the rose gardens will not be removed. I see this as a testament to how much the people living in Betton Hills care about its continued beauty and preservation.

We also appreciate our neighbors who serve on the BHNA board and contribute their time and efforts to keeping our neighborhood great. Melissa Jacoby was very helpful in covering the CONA meetings and keeping us up to date on the latest developments and potential problems that could affect our neighborhood.

I realized a few years ago, when I was directly affected by a neighbor's efforts to build several homes on one lot on my street, how important it is to have a strong neighborhood association. It was clear to me our elected officials took notice when Betton Hills lobbied for a new city ordinance that would restrict and protect the neighborhood. I heard one official state that she had not seen an ordinance passed so quickly. That was due in large part to the many calls and emails from your neighbors voicing their concerns.

We are always looking for new members to the BHNA and for individuals to serve on our board. Recently, Tom Whitaker, Susan Fleming, and Hilda Gilchrist all agreed to join our board; thanks to all of you. The board meets the first Thursday of the month at 7:30 p.m. at the Ashford Club Apartments pool house on Thomasville Road. I hope to see you at a meeting.

This past year was a good one for Betton Hills. Some of the highlights include being named "Neighborhood of the Year." Our Family Fun Day in April was a big hit, and everyone had a great time. The October fall social was also well attended. County Commissioner Bob Rackleff attended

Arbor Day 2010

By Donna Legare

When: Saturday, February 6th, 9:00 AM--11:00AM, or leave earlier if you need to!

Where: McCord Park--meet at the martin pole.

Bring: Garden gloves, hand saws, shovels, and loppers if you have them.

We have been planting native trees and shrubs, as well as fruit trees, in neighborhood parks on Arbor Day for many years. This year, we will add 20 native magnolia trees to the park, mulch the past plantings and have a morning of habitat improvement at McCord Park as we work on the removal of invasive alien plants, primarily Chinese ligustrum, that are sprouting all through the woods between McCord Park and Armistead Road. We will also remove tallow trees and mimosa trees.

Lots of volunteers will be needed in order to make a significant dent! We will pull the small trees, roots and all, and saw down the large ones and leave them for the city crew to chip into mulch.

Once again, the City of Tallahassee is generously providing bales of pine straw for us to mulch past and new plantings. We will also add a predator guard to the martin pole and clean martin gourds, wood duck houses, and the bluebird house. We will plant a couple of American beautyberries in the wildlife garden dedicated to Ann Camp. The Harper family has donated a martin pole and gourds which we will install at Harriman Circle.

We could use the help of Boy Scout Troops, Girl Scout Troops, Environmental Clubs, friends, and families to accomplish our goals. Call Donna Legare at 386-1148 if you are able to help that morning.

Remembrance of Arbor Days Past...

Find all the shovels! It's Arbor Day. I've attended Arbor Day with the Betton Hills Neighborhood Association for the past several years. I've helped plant dogwood trees along Betton Road, clean out the cemetery, and plant trees and clean out bird houses in McCord Park. However, my favorite of all these times was two years ago when I helped clean out two wood duck houses in the little woods behind the pond at McCord Park. We came upon one where the eggs had been abandoned for reasons unknown, so we opened the eggs. It was interesting to see the ratio of eggs that had started to develop and eggs that hadn't. There were several eggs that had baby ducks that had been very close to hatching because they had developed eyes, beaks, and almost a complete covering of feathers.

I'm very glad that I went to Arbor Day that year, because I know that since we cleaned out that nest other wood ducks could come and lay eggs in it the next year, instead of it being filled with abandoned eggs.

-- Rhemy Brezin

Arbor Day is one of my favorite neighborhood activities. It doesn't take too much planning and we always have something done at the end of the day. Along the way there's plenty of time for talking with friends, scanning the skies for hawks or eagles, checking out last year's reproductive success in the wood duck and bluebird houses, and even for planting a few trees and bushes.

One of my favorite Arbor Days was when we first planted the trees that now grace the southern edge of McCord Park, near Trescott. Getting that year's planting done was a warm job on a cold day, the digging and planting, then laying out plenty of mulch. Still, as we leaned against our shovels at job's end, we grinned thinking about a someday small but diverse urban forest. Today I grin anew as I see those saplings have grown to young trees and the forest community begins to take shape. And each tree has a story as I think back on who planted it. It may be a cliched metaphor, but as those trees grow, my friendships with my Arbor Day aficionados have grown in pace. Our roots grow deeper, our arms reach out and intermingle, we share the sun and the rain. I can't say enough in thanks for Donna Legare and Jody Walthall for starting our Arbor Day and keeping it going.

And besides the neighborly touch of Arbor Day, it's not too bad to see, too, that when we take care of the Earth, the Earth takes care of us.

-- Mike Brezin

THIS ARBOR DAY, BECOME A WEED BUSTER

By Hilda Gilchrist

Donna Legare will continue to lead us in the BHNA Noxious Weed Control Program on Arbor Day 2010 (February 6th.) In the process, BHNA hopes to enlist residents to be “weed busters” helping to fight leafy invaders that damage natural ecosystems.

Noxious weeds aren’t necessarily the ones that sting you, poison you, or give you allergies. Noxious weeds are defined in a legal and biological sense to include non-native plants that are fast-growing, aggressive to native plants and difficult to remove, yet not so widespread that eradication is practically impossible. The following is a list of some of the noxious weeds that are found in and affecting our neighborhood.

Ardesia (Ardesia crenata)--predominantly an escaped garden ornamental. Very prolific and easily established berries. Can choke out trees and desirable plants.

Asian Jasmine (Trachelospermum jasminoides)--predominantly an escaped garden ornamental. Very aggressive trailing growth. Can choke out trees and desirable plants.

Nandina (Nandina domestica)--predominantly an urban weed and an escaped garden ornamental. Very prolific and easily established berries. Can choke out trees and desirable plants.

Privet (Ligustrum lucidum)--predominantly an urban weed and an escaped garden ornamental.

Tallow tree (Sapulum sebiferum)--rapid growing species that has escaped cultivation and naturalized, choking out wildlife habitat and clogging drainage ditches and irrigation canals. Its seeds are carried in wetlands where it crowds out native and desirable plants and endangers the wildlife that depend on the native plants.

Wandering Jew (Tradescantia fluminensis)--an herbaceous perennial sold by many nurseries as hanging baskets. It escapes cultivation and spreads rapidly in moist, naturalistic settings where it is considered a pest, since it crowds out desirable plants.

Hydrilla--the most problematic aquatic plant in the US, it forms extensive surface mats that destroy freshwater fish habitat and recreation areas.

Fighting weeds is a long struggle, but people can really make a difference. Pulling weeds keeps millions of seeds from taking hold. Weed plants can produce up to 30,000 seeds, and they can live up to 60 years.

Removing colonies of plants like Nandina and Ardesia keeps their prolific berries from seeding. Edging ground cover beds of Asian Jasmine regularly can assist in keeping this aggressive vine from becoming a nuisance on your neighbor’s property.

Listed below are the BHNA Noxious Weed Control Program goals for the 2010 season. You are invited to join us as we work to eliminate these unwanted weeds.

BHNA Noxious Weed Control Program 2010 Goals

Increase the volunteer effort.

Increase awareness of noxious weeds in our neighborhood.

Increase work on eradication of weeds in our neighborhood.

Follow up with surveys to determine where noxious weed patches are increasing or declining.

Outline a program to address weed infestations from adjoining properties that create a nuisance to others.

EDIBLE GARDENING CLUB

CHAYOTES AND APPETIZERS, BREAD AND WORMS, OH MY!

By Sue Hansen

The Edible Gardening Club held its 4th meeting on Monday, December 7, at 6:00 PM in the pavilion at Winthrop Park. Ed Schroeder, Master Gardener, gave a presentation on vermiculture, or the art of growing worms for the compost they produce, which is very beneficial to all types of plants.

There were LOTS of questions, and everyone actually handled the plastic bag full of wrigglers. Chayotes (a type of squash.) appetizers, homemade bread, a mango plant, and seeds were shared. A good time was had by all, and we will meet again the first Monday in January, and the first Monday in February, 2010.

Possible activities:

Share gardening how-to, tips, and information

Share seeds and plants

Discuss and review gardening equipment

Presentations by horticulture professionals

Share our produce and dishes from our gardens

We welcome new input and ideas! Contact Elizabeth Marcovich at 386-8059 or Nathan Ballentine at nathan.ballentine@gmail.com. Or to join the contact list email Elizabeth at emarcovich@comcast.net or Sue Hansen at shansen1070@yahoo.com.

Native Plants for Native Wildlife--The Natural Garden

By Donna Legare

In Tallahassee, we have many fine non-native plants to use in our landscapes--camellia, azalea, and crepe myrtle all come to mind. The claims that native plants are easier to grow and require less water sometimes do not hold up.

For me, the main reason to choose native plants in the landscape is to promote the unique relationships between our native plants and animals, from the smallest microorganisms to insects and other invertebrates to birds and raccoons that I observe using plants in my own yard. Simply put, what you plant in your yard makes a difference to wildlife. Here are a few examples.

Red buckeye blooms in mid to late March, just in time for the return of ruby-throated hummingbirds from Central America. The hummers drink nectar from red tubular flowers and, in return, provide pollination services for this native tree whose nuts are food for other wildlife.

Sweetgum trees have close relationships with several animals. When American goldfinch arrive in late fall or winter, they can be seen high in sweet-gum trees clinging to the prickly balls feasting on abundant sweetgum seeds. This year, pine siskins also migrated here from the far north and could be found eating sweetgum seeds prior to visiting thistle and sunflower feeders. Many of our resident birds, like the Carolina chickadee, also depend on the seeds of sweetgum.

Most of our butterflies and moths depend on native plants, not just for nectar, but for sustenance while in the larval stage (caterpillar.) Luna moths lay their eggs on sweetgum, hickory, walnut, or birch. A female may lay 200 eggs. Of the 200, only two or three may live to reproduce. The rest become part of the web of life--as caterpillars eaten by wrens, spiders, parasitoids...the cocoon itself is often preyed upon by a hungry bird.

In landscaping our yard, Jody and I have chosen to use primarily native plants. We know that native wildlife has evolved throughout the eons with its native flora and that they need each other. All of our trees--live oak, dogwood, blue beech, cabbage palm, loblolly pine, red buckeye, and parsley hawthorn are native. We supplement with specially chosen non-natives--a tea olive for its winter fragrance, camellia for its winter blooms, herbs and perennials for their appeal to our tastes and to attract pollinators. It has been one big experiment for the last 17 years and we enjoy watching the outcome on a daily basis.

WHAT'S HAPPENING, BETTON HILLS?

We invite you to check out these upcoming community events, and to come join the neighborhood fun!

Movie Under The Stars

Saturday, January 30, 6:00PM

Betton Hills Nature Center

For those of you who enjoy outdoor movie parks, this event is for you. We will be showing a movie at the Betton Hills Nature Center on January 30th at 6:00 PM. The Nature Center is a small outdoor amphitheater with a bonfire pit, located behind Ashford Club Apartments, which are just north of Betton Road on Thomasville Road.

Last fall we screened "Fly Away Home" and "Back to the Future" and the movie we select this time will also be family friendly, so bring all members of your family along with blankets and lawn chairs.

We will have marshmallows to roast! Check the event calendar at www.mybettonhills.org for the movie title.

BADMINTON IN BETTON HILLS

What a great combination: Betton and badminton! With so many green spaces in our gorgeous neighborhood, badminton is the perfect outdoor activity. It can be played by young and old, those into light recreation or more challenging athletic pursuits, and those with a sense of humor as well as those who need some humor. :-)

During the afternoon for several weekends in February, we will set up two badminton courts with equipment in our neighborhood parks. The schedule is below. Check the BHNA event calendar at www.mybettonhills.org for updates. If the events are successful, more badminton days will be added to the schedule, so come on out and play!

the event as well as Officer De-lonna Hartley, from TPD. She spoke about the neighborhood crime watch program and has offered to put on a seminar for any parents interested in child safety measures. (Please see mybettonhills.org for information on this worthwhile event.) Finally, Bill Jones, our resident musician, once again led the popular Christmas caroling procession on Christmas Eve at Harriman Circle. Thanks to all who joined us for these great Betton Hills neighborhood traditions!

As I write this, Christmas is less than a week away, and many people are traveling during the holidays. Officer Hartley noted that a significant portion of the burglaries being reported to TPD are due to unlocked vehicles. Please keep this in mind as well as her suggestion to keep porch lights on at night. Please also help your neighbors by keeping an eye on their property while they are away and reporting any suspicious activity not just during the holidays, but throughout the year.

I hope you all enjoyed the holidays, and have a happy New Year!
